WELCOME

Come in! Welcome to our house. I'm Avondale's president and your host for the weekend.

Playing host is a role I relish because hospitality is, or should be, central to Christian practice and we are a Christian higher education provider.

A book by Christine Pohl—Making Room: Recovering hospitality as a Christian tradition—takes us back to the Old and New Testaments to remind us of hospitality's roots. The biblical stories connect hospitality with the presence of God, with promise and with blessing. These stories share the following characteristics: an emphasis on recognition and respect, often through shared meals; the meeting of physical needs; and the forging and strengthening of relationships that reinforce identity.

A sense of wholeness seems to be central, doing as much good for the host as for the guest. The early Christians recognised this by making hospitality a qualification for leadership.

Can you see the similarities between hospitality and Homecoming? We return not as leaders or followers but as students. As equals. We return to celebrate, to share and to worship. To sustain. We return to connect and to reconnect. With one another.

As the largest Avondale Alumni event of the year, Homecoming reminds us of our common heritage: our Christian education. That education provided us with the "power to think and do" (Ellen White, Education, p. 17). We are encouraged to not only explore but also engage. Our thinking must lead to doing that serves the needs of others.

I'm going to invite you over the weekend to give to Avondale's Think&Do campaign. Our gifts will primarily support our research centres as they seek a better understanding of Christian education, health and lifestyle, teaching and learning and spirituality and worship. Giving to the centres will help fund new projects, train more research supervisors, support employment of research assistants and improve information technology to build capacity for data processing.

Journey with us as we accept the challenge of learning and discovery and as we use this knowledge to improve lives.

As Homecoming hosts and guests, we share a responsibility to do good . . . together.

ALINA VAN RENSBURG YOUNG ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR

Pr Alina (Cocetti) van Rensburg received her call to ministry while studying to be a physiotherapist. Volunteering in the Youth Department of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in South Queensland during a gap year ignited a passion. "It was then a matter of 'when' not 'if' I would attend Avondale."

Alina returned to complete her studies while continuing to serve in high school ministry at her local church. She graduated with a Bachelor of Physiotherapy from the University of Queensland in 2005 and then worked for Queensland Health. The "when I attend Avondale" came several years later along with a Graduate Diploma in Ministry and a Graduate Diploma in Theology, from which Alina graduated with distinction in 2011.

Alina's Avondale experience—lifelong mentors, the blessings of a Bible lands tour and a spiritual community—prepared her for entry into ministry, where she now seeks to build the church by encouraging people to "see themselves as the living, breathing expression of Jesus." Alina accepted a call as Chaplain at Brisbane Adventist College in 2012 and as Director of Young Adult Ministries—the first in Australia—for the church in South Queensland in 2016.

An effective young adult ministry is reflected in the local church, says Alina. "My role is to inspire, equip and empower a movement of young adult leaders." One of the initiatives Alina and husband Martin have introduced in young adult ministry is #wethechurch. It is a call for 18-30-plus-year-olds to own their faith and their role in the church. "As young adults, we want to respond to our calling—we want to step up, engage and be the church we are called to be," says Alina.

A commissioning earlier this year means Alina is now one of two Pr A van Rensburgs—her father-in-law is Pr André van Rensburg, who's receiving the honour year citation from the Class of 1977 at Homecoming this year.

Avondale Alumni honours Pr Alina van Rensburg for inspiring and empowering young adults to live out their faith in their spheres of influence.—Brenton Stacey

ESTHER LANE

ALUMNA OF THE YEAR

Esther (Strahan) Lane loves to teach. Yes, teaching has shaped her career, but no, it has not defined it. Those in Esther's classrooms have defined a calling that began with her graduation from the Australasian Missionary College in 1957 and continued for 40 years—Esther took only five years off to raise her children.

Across those decades, Esther taught in almost all levels of education, from preschool to university. She remembers teaching at mini-schools in the Queensland outback, where children studying by distance would meet at a homestead for a block of intensive classes. In 1973, the then Division of Preschool Education in Queensland selected Esther and other teachers to establish the first state preschools. Esther headed the preschool in Chermside. She also enjoyed teaching students with disabilities as part of a role with the Endeavour Foundation and teaching English as a second language to Technical and Further Education students.

Many of the students taking the English classes were those seeking refuge in Australia following the break-up of Yugoslavia. The experience taught Esther skills in diplomacy. "I said, 'Leave all your baggage back where you came from. In Australia, these are your new friends.' This experience was almost more of an education for me than for them."

Esther would teach similar classes at Griffith University and in several of the private language schools in Brisbane. In retirement, she continued to serve as a volunteer in applied linguistics—she and husband Warren taught English in Korea for two-and-a-half years.

The couple's four daughters—Bronwyn, Andrea, Wendy and Penelope—all married, so Warren and Esther can now count four sons-in-law, 14 grandchildren and one granddaughter-in-law. Between them all, they have about 30 university degrees. "Our family rejoices in the love of God," says Esther, "and we've appreciated how the Seventh-day Adventist Church has conveyed that love through its beliefs and values over the years."

Avondale Alumni honours Esther Lane for her lifelong commitment to the ministry of teaching.—Brenton Stacey

WILF PINCHIN

ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR

Mathematics and music, two passions of Avondale Alumni's Alumnus of the Year, have been the backbone of the working life of Dr Wilf Pinchin. Likewise, Wilf has been the backbone of mathematics at Avondale College—the 1967 graduate's tenure as lecturer spanned 40 years.

Born in Castlemaine, Victoria, Wilf completed an education degree at Avondale at the suggestion of his pastor and parents. In the following year, he completed a Bachelor of Science through the University of London then joined the college staff. He lectured for 27 years before a transfer on faculty exchange to Walla Walla College (Washington, USA). Wilf had completed a PhD in mathematics at The University of Newcastle and served twice as head of the mathematics and computing department at Avondale before the transfer. He returned to Avondale as a senior lecturer and would serve in that role until his retirement in 2008.

A reward for Wilf's years of service has been following the academic development and progress of his students. "It has been an increasing privilege to see them contributing to church and society."

A musician who played euphonium, trumpet and harmonica, Wilf formed the Avondale College Concert Band. He also joined the Avondale Brass Band and served as its president for several years. An interest in acoustics and in sound engineering saw Wilf design, install and operate the sound systems in the Auditorium and chapels on Avondale's Lake Macquarie campus and in other local Seventh-day Adventist churches. He hand built amplifiers, mixers and speakers and rebuilt the sound system in College Church. And choirs, orchestras and visiting artists have benefited from his experience and his support.

Wilf married Colleen Simms in 1973. Their first date: rat shooting on a poultry farm. "Clearly, it worked!" The couple have two sons, Mark and Bradley. Wilf describes Colleen, for whom he now cares—she has Parkinson's disease—as patient, as a constant source of encouragement and as an inspiration to colleagues and students.

Avondale Alumni honours Dr Wilf Pinchin for his lifelong commitment to quality education and infrastructure at Avondale and for his selfless devotion to his wife.—Sara Bolst

AUDREY JACKSON, 1947

“There’s no point in being alive if you can’t help others” defines the life of Audrey Jackson. This commitment to service coincided with a career change in the years after Audrey attended the Australasian Missionary College.

Audrey completed her training at Sydney Adventist Hospital (“the San”) in 1953 before moving to Victoria to work at the Warburton Sanitarium and Hospital. She returned to the San in 1957 as charge nurse in the operating theatre. Five years at North York Branson Hospital in Toronto, Canada, followed—Audrey started as a nurse and finished as supervisor.

Two more San roles—charge nurse on the surgical ward and head of the nursing school—bookended a Diploma of Nursing Administration from The University of Sydney in 1964. Audrey’s longest tenure came next, as director of nursing at Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney, British Columbia. Retirement beckoned after a return to Australia, 12 years in other nursing roles and to denominational service as a charge nurse at Adventist Aged Care—Kings Langley in Sydney.

As a student of George Greer’s at Avondale, Audrey sang in the new symphonic choir. She continued to perform, becoming a funeral and wedding singer in Sidney, which would also name her as businesswoman of the year.

Audrey “adopted” two daughters in Canada. This ability to connect with young adults began in Wahroonga, where Audrey organised visitations to youth detention centres, hospitals and nursing homes. She would also do the same in Sidney. Audrey continues to volunteer, including 10 years at Cooranbong Community Services Centre.

The Class of 1947 honours Audrey Jackson for her commitment to service.—Brenton Stacey

NORENE CLOUTEN, 1957

Born on Avondale Road, Norene (Rippon) Clouten was an Avondale girl from the beginning. Attending Avondale School for both her primary and high school education, it was her father’s insistence that set her academic course. “My daughter takes science,” he informed the headmaster, having been told the girls could study only the arts. He won—Norene sat with the boys.

At 16, she received a Commonwealth Scholarship and took on the yearlong secretarial course at what was then the Australasian Missionary College, from which she graduated in 1957. The following year she enrolled in physiotherapy at The University of Sydney and after her graduation worked at the Sydney Sanitarium.

During her career, Norene held positions in Sweden, Scotland and Ohio and Michigan, USA, where she completed postgraduate study. In 1985, she graduated with honours from Western Michigan University with a master’s degree in educational leadership. She received her doctorate in 1991. Norene held a leadership position in the Andrews University honours program and was president of interdisciplinary honours society Phi Kappa Phi.

Now in retirement, Norene enjoys travelling with husband Neville and spending time with her grandchildren in the United States. One of her passion projects has been the building of a primary school for orphaned children in Rapogi, Kenya. And as for art, squeezing dabs of four colours onto china plates aboard cruise ships has been a great beginning for Neville’s watercolour workshops, but it has never led her to cross the line that defines science.

The Class of 1957 honours Norene Clouten for her dedication to health and to Christian education.—Neville Clouten

ALAN WHITE, 1957

Pr Alan White grew up in the pine forests of Rotorua, New Zealand. He would have followed father Bill into electrical engineering but missionary Pr John Keith steered him to Longburn then Avondale, from where he graduated with bachelor degrees in theology and in secondary education. He married the love of his life, Nancy Royce, in 1959.

Alan’s first calls: to Canberra as a Seventh-day Adventist literature evangelist and then to church evangelistic work in Gippsland, Ballarat and Melbourne. An appointment as director of the church’s Aoba District in the then cannibal New Hebrides followed in 1964—he remembers sleeping beside the chief’s pet boar in one village. Alan’s engineering experience would often prove useful—in one example, he blew up a large rock with gelignite to build an airstrip with a bulldozer. His mission service would continue as president of the church in the vast Gilbert and Ellice Islands in 1970.

A return to Australia saw roles as Preceptor at Carmel College then local church ministry in Fremantle, Western Australia. A transfer to Victoria in 1979 precipitated a career change. Alan would go on to direct trust services for the church in Trans-Australia and in the South Pacific before a call as Associate Director of Trust Services for the worldwide church. The tenure would span 12 years.

Many of the cultural practises Alan experienced in this travels challenged him, particularly how on the death of a husband the nearest male relative would take possession of all assets, leaving the wife destitute. “I sought through the preparation of legal wills to protect the rightful inheritance of women and children.”

The Class of 1957 honours Pr Alan White for a lifetime of service to the Adventist Church and for his commitment to equity and justice.

ATHOL GROSSE, 1967

Much of Athol Grosse's early life as a pastor's kid was spent in rural Victoria, where he developed a passion for horticulture, building and practical things. So, when Athol came to Avondale in 1964, he was delighted to get a job on the farm and became one of Boss Irvine's "dairy boys."

Athol graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in secondary teaching and married Zoe Corker in 1970. His first teaching appointment was to the Avondale high school, marking the beginning of a 40-year ministry in Seventh-day Adventist education.

His career took the family across the country and to posts overseas. Sons Derryn and Lyndon were born in Murwillumbah before the move to Western Australia, where Athol served as principal in Busselton, then teacher at the Victoria Park high school in Perth.

In 1979, he began a seven-year stint of mission service as principal of Papaaroa College on Rarotonga, where sons Joel and Timothy were born. Here his practical skills were in high demand and saw him building new classrooms, a library, a manual arts block, house and primary school on the island of Atiu.

On his return to Western Australia, Athol served as principal for the next 10 years, first at Albany, then Karalundi. He designed the new Karalundi church and was involved in a number of mission projects: a church and house at Finke and Tennant Creek; a church in the Solomon Islands; schools in Zambia and Botswana; orphanages in Bali and Sulawesi; and a clinic in Ethiopia. It's this practical ministry, working with his hands, for which Athol is known.

The Class of 1967 honours Athol Grosse for a life of dedicated service to Adventist education and to practical ministry.—Raymond Coombe

ANDRÉ VAN RENSBURG, 1977

Pr André van Rensburg still feels the call to the local church. With almost 40 years of pastoral experience at 19 churches in two countries, André describes sharing the joys and heartaches of his church family as "the greatest honour." His advice for those new to ministry? Lead your church but also take it with you. "Aussies want strong pastors but also relational pastors."

Long tenures at the Trinity Gardens, Canberra National, Springwood and now Eight Mile Plains Seventh-day Adventist Churches are milestones in André's ministry. He has also served as a representative for local church ministers on the executive committees of the worldwide Adventist Church and of the church in the South Pacific.

The death of son Erik in 2006 changed André and wife Margaret's life. "God uses our wound to help us minister to others who are wounded. We live for God and for the invisible world, but we try to make a difference in this world. To connect people to a loving community, a compassionate God, offering them faith, hope and love, what more can one want?" Margaret and son Martin's support have strengthened André's ministry. "None of us live in isolation and we do not accomplish anything by ourselves."

Connecting with those who've found refuge in Australia has enriched the Van Rensburg's lives. André and Margaret "adopted" a daughter, Neema, from Congo. And they've travelled to Iran—Andre enjoys reading the works of Persian poets Hafez, Rumi and Saadi—to meet the families and friends of those to whom André and his church family are ministering.

The Class of 1977 honours Pr André van Rensburg for his commitment to mission and to the ministry of the local church.—Brenton Stacey

GRAEME HARRIS, 1987

For the record, Graeme Harris is a mathematics teacher, "but I don't want to be remembered as just a mathematics teacher. I want to be remembered as someone who loves mathematics, who has a sense of humour and who's willing to help students see challenging concepts as understandable and relevant." He says being approachable and willing to help are the keys to helping students grow.

The relationships Graeme builds with his students—particularly on camps and on trips to the Great Barrier Reef, the outback, the snow and France (four times now)—breaks down fears of falling behind. "I don't like defining people by a grade but by their behaviour. How you treat people is important to me."

Adventure travel, with or without students, is more than a hobby for Graeme. His next challenge: trekking to Mount Everest base camp and arriving on Christmas Day this year. The jungle then calls.

Graeme's call to Avondale came in Year 12. A teacher from Albury, New South Wales, took the Murray High School student and a friend to the college during the holidays. "From my first prac teaching experience, I knew I was doing what I loved."

Graeme began his teaching career at Adelaide Adventist High School. After five years, he moved across the border to Lilydale Adventist Academy in Victoria. Seven years at Central Coast Adventist School in New South Wales and six at Northpine Christian College in Queensland followed. Graeme returned to Central Coast, where he continues to teach, in 2009.

The Class of 1987 honours Graeme Harris for serving as a supportive role model for his students.—Brenton Stacey

JEFF CROCOMBE, 1997

It's not just working in education that brings fulfilment to Professor Jeff Crocombe but working in countries where education can make such a difference to life. Jeff is a former Senior Lecturer in theology at Helderberg College in South Africa and at Pacific Adventist University in Papua New Guinea, where he is now Deputy Vice-Chancellor.

"I'm proud we educate students who may be the first in their extended families, and often the first in their village or area, to attend university. I'm particularly proud when I see former students living the biblical mandate of working for justice, defending the disenfranchised and helping those in need." Jeff is an advocate for equality, "where everyone is viewed as created in the image of God."

Jeff met wife Ruth at Avondale. "My first and her last year overlapped. We met through the student newspaper." They now have a daughter, Araminta, and have traveled as a family to every continent except Antarctica.

Graduating with distinction from the Bachelor of Arts (Theology) degree, Jeff served as a local church minister in Victoria for three years. He then returned to university, completing postgraduate study in history, teaching and, in 2011, a PhD in religious history.

Life outside of academia is mostly outdoors. A nature photographer, Jeff would like to see at least half of the world's more than 10,000 species of birds. His list stands at 1333. He's a frequent visitor to Varirata National Park in Port Moresby, home to more than 100 species. His photographs of the New Guinea cryptic and forest bittern are some of the best that exist.

The Class of 1997 honours Professor Jeff Crocombe for his commitment to education that improves the lives of others.—Brenton Stacey

TRUDY ADAMS, 2007

A lack of realistic and relatable young adult fiction informed by Christian values motivated Trudy Adams to begin writing.

She began her first novel, Desolate Beauty, which Ark House Press published in 2009, at age 17. It would later win third prize in the 2010 Australian Christian Book of the Year Awards. Trudy has since signed a contract with Uptone Pictures and Damascus Road Productions for Desolate Beauty to become a movie—filming begins in Oklahoma, USA, in October this year. Her second novel, Judging Meghan, followed that same year and Broken Melody (both Wombat Books) in 2013. Trudy's next novel, The Sunshine List (Onwards & Upwards Publishing), won second prize in the 2015 Australian Christian Young Writers Awards and will be released on October 1.

Trudy writes and works for teenagers from difficult backgrounds "who, through no fault of their own, are forced to make adult decisions without adult experience or support." A former Youth Worker at The Salvation Army Oasis Youth Centre and Coordinator of the Kurri Youth Centre, Trudy is now a Caseworker for the New South Wales Department of Family and Community Services. This "gritty but rewarding work" sees her working with young adults in situations of drug and alcohol misuse, homelessness, domestic violence, poverty and mental health issues.

The local community also benefits from Trudy's willingness to volunteer. She is a firefighter with the Cooranbong Rural Fire Brigade and a regular presenter of writing workshops for high school students.

The Class of 2007 honours Trudy Adams for using the power of stories to create "courage out of fear, knowledge out of ignorance and hope out of despair."—Brenton Stacey

Think&DO

A JOURNEY THROUGH GIVING WITH AVONDALE

Power to think and do: it's a gift from the Creator. Seventh-day Adventist Church pioneer Ellen White makes the statement to encourage exploration and engagement (Education, p. 17). Giving to Avondale through its Think&Do campaign demonstrates your support for her philosophy.

Journey with us as we accept the challenge of learning and discovery, of educating leaders and of developing quality infrastructure. And as we use this knowledge and these resources to improve lives. Your donation will help our research centres as they seek to give us a better understanding of Christian education, health and lifestyle, teaching and learning and spirituality and worship.

Donations above $2 are tax deductible in Australia.

The gift of thinking and doing. Accept it. Use it. Support it.
