2015 ANNUAL APPEAL

LIFESTYLE IS THE BEST MEDICINE!

Scientific evidence is showing that returning to a simple lifestyle is often the best way to manage and treat chronic disease.

Support Avondale College of Higher Education's Lifestyle Research Centre as it leads in the study of lifestyle medicine and grows its contribution to the Seventh-day Adventist Church's comprehensive health strategy.

The centre's achievements include:

- studying the outcomes of the Complete Health Improvement Programs and the effectiveness of a modified CHIP for illiterate communities in the South Pacific;
- publishing papers in academic journals such as the British Medical Journal Open; and
- offering postgraduate degrees in lifestyle medicine.

Thank you for giving to Avondale's Annual Appeal this year and for helping us become healthier and happier.

THANK YOU!

The 2014 Annual Appeal raised one-quarter ($215,000) of the cost of building a new pitched roof for Avondale College Seventh-day Adventist Church. You gave generously.

WELCOME BACK

Yes, it's a fitting Homecoming statement; but it's also the name of a song from the 1970s television sitcom Welcome Back, Kotter, in which a teacher returns to his alma mater to help a group of struggling students realise their potential. While I can't remember watching the show, the song's lyrics are also a good fit for Homecoming. Composer John Sebastian added a second verse for the song's release as a single:

*And I smile when I think how you must have been
And I know what a scene you were learning in
Was there something that made you come back again?*

Perhaps that something is found in Avondale's motto, "For a Greater Vision of World Needs." Many of you saw that vision. It changed your lives and in many cases your addresses! You took the imperative to go literally. Our focus is to foster a Christian learning community that is dedicated to serve—and Avondale alumni continue to serve. Perhaps this is why you came back again, to reconnect with classmates who have similar values.

Back to those lyrics. I smiled when I read this:

The names have all changed since you hung around but those dreams have remained and they're turned around.

Then I read the next two lines (and I apologise for the colloquial language!):

Who'd have thought they'd lead ya back here where we need ya.

Avondale needs you, its alumni, as it journeys toward university college status. With the granting of self-accrediting authority, Avondale is now considered a leader among private higher education providers. With leadership comes responsibility; a responsibility to continue embracing the challenge of learning and discovery.

We have established our Lifestyle Research Centre in response to this challenge. It's leading in the study of lifestyle medicine and growing its contribution to the Seventh-day Adventist Church's comprehensive health strategy, particularly through the Complete Health Improvement Programs (CHIP).

I want you to do two things over this welcome back weekend. One, remember the greater vision and where it has led in your life. And two, give to support research that is helping us as individuals and as a community thrive in every way.

Yes, welcome back! And blessings for the weekend.

KRYSTLE PRAESTIIN

It was clear from the start that Krystle Praestiin's life would be anything but ordinary. Born in Cochabamba, Bolivia, to parents Axel and Julie Praestiin, workers for the Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA) in Denmark, Krystle spent her early childhood in South America. When the Praestiins moved to Australia, Krystle attended Avondale School and, following her high school graduation in 2003, enrolled in the primary education course at Avondale. She later transferred into the Bachelor of Arts course, majoring in international development studies.

In 2006, she worked at Vejlebjergskolen, a Seventh-day Adventist boarding school in Denmark, and in 2009 completed her international development studies placement with ADRA Denmark. Following her graduation from Avondale in December, Krystle was awarded a two-year internship with ADRA Malawi.

Getting to the villages in which ADRA Malawi worked required time and effort. The frequent trips along bumpy dirt roads through landscapes dotted with baobab trees—they're some of the things she remembers the most. "My time in Africa provided many interesting experiences," says Krystle. One that stood out: interviewing a family for a story on adult literacy classes. "I was blown away by how learning to read, write and do basic maths had helped them develop a profitable business, improve their housing, provide food, and value sending their children to also receive an education. It was the perfect ripple effect." During her time in Malawi, Krystle also began the Krystle Clear Waters project, funded in part by Avondale College Seventh-day Adventist Church. The project raised funds for wells in remote villages where clean water was scarce—many villagers previously walked up to six hours to collect it.

Krystle returned to Australia in 2011 and now works with the Federal Court of Australia as project officer for the Pacific Judicial Development Programme. The program partners with courts in the Pacific to help improve access to justice and governance in the region. "I have a passion for empowering communities and people to reach their full potential," says Krystle. "My goal is to keep doing that in whatever capacity I can."

The Avondale Alumni Association honours Krystle for her commitment to development and passion for empowerment and justice.

VERONIKA CHESTER

Veronika Chester enjoyed her Avondale experience so much, she graduated twice—in 1965 and with a Bachelor of Education in 1995. She received a scholarship during the final year of her Diploma of Primary Teaching that committed her to work for the Seventh-day Adventist Church for a year after graduation. So began a lifetime of service—often as a sole teacher—at Adventist schools in Australia and the Pacific islands.

Her first calling: Wagga Wagga, followed by Fulton College, the first of six appointments to educational institutions in the islands. The last of these—as lecturer in education and English at Pacific Adventist University in Papua New Guinea, a role that also saw her develop literacy programs for local villages—preceded Veronika’s retirement. She has continued to serve in retirement as a teacher trainer in the Solomon Islands and Vanuatu and as a support for teacher induction in northern Australia.

Veronika’s European heritage—a Szeszeran from Berlin who has returned at least three times to the country of her birth—saw her teach German at Avondale and Toronto schools for six years. She came to the role with experience as a primary supervisor at Central Coast and Hamilton schools.

Veronika first met husband Graham at a friend’s wedding—he played violin while she recited a poem. The two became soulmates, married in 1970 and raised three children—Kerralyn, Lynden and Sharlene. Music played a significant role in and out of the home—the family would often lead musical programs at aged-care facilities. This came naturally to Veronika—she had sung in the Avondale Symphonic Choir, performed in musicals and eisteddfods and led choirs at some of the institutions in which she taught. She continues to coordinate musical programs for the Avondale Lifestyle Community. Rounding out this interest in the arts: a record as a published writer and as a public speaker.

Veronika thanks God, profusely, for His providence. “It’s been a great journey.”

The Avondale Alumni Association honours Veronika for her lifetime of service to Adventist education and for her commitment to the ministry of teaching.

PR DAVID CURRIE

Ask 10-year-old David Currie what he wanted to do with his life and his answer would have been to bring people to Christ and to the church. Now 80, the Seventh-day Adventist minister and evangelist is still doing that with as much passion as in his first years of denominational service. And wife Gaya (nee Wilton) is still by his side.

The two married in 1956, the year after David graduated from the Australasian Missionary College. The union has produced four children—Delphine, Kelvin, Adelle and Althea. All were born during a period in which David served as a minister and evangelist for the Adventist Church’s conferences in Tasmania, Western Australia and South New Zealand. He returned to Avondale in 1971 to teach practical theology and to study for his bachelor’s degree. A call from the church in the United Kingdom to serve as the minister’s minister and as evangelist followed.

David transitioned into administrative roles after accepting a call as president of the church in northern New South Wales in 1980. He drew on previous experience as Ministerial Association secretary and added a new role as Spirit of Prophecy director for the church in the South Pacific before heading the church’s Trans-Australian Union Conference. Between these appointments came perhaps David’s most significant role: as coordinator for the church in Europe’s Global Mission ministry.

Retirement has seen David return to local church ministry, at first in Victoria and now in Chiang Mai, Thailand.

David presented the Alumni Lecture at Homecoming in 2008. His historical review of evangelism in the South Pacific served as a reminder of the characteristics of successful outreach—evangelists as skilled speakers and marketers, the ability to adapt, the use of new technology, and the courage to share and publicly defend one’s faith. David noted the decline in number of evangelists and the lack of connection Adventist Church members now have with evangelistic programs. “Where are the reapers?” he asked.

The Avondale Alumni Association honours David for a lifetime of faith sharing and soul winning.

CITATIONS

Each year at Homecoming, citations are awarded to a member of each honour year class who has made an outstanding contribution through their work or service. Nominations come from members of the Homecoming Committee.

GLYNN LITSTER, 1945

Glynn Litster arrived at the Australasian Missionary College on a whim. He'd missed out on a place at The University of Melbourne and, unsure of what to do next, arrived at Avondale via the "Gospel Chariot" bus from Dora Creek Station. Thus began Glynn's adventure into the world of education—a course then known as theological normal to prevent students from being drafted into World War Two.

Following his graduation in 1945, Glynn took his first teaching position in South New Zealand before returning to Australia. He married Elva, who he had first met at Avondale, in 1951. Daughter Glenda was born in 1953 and son Reg in 1955. The family was then called to Fulton College in Fiji.

A call to Samoa came while they were back in Australia on an early furlough—"I went begrudgingly," Glynn says, but he admits he soon fell in love with the country. Since returning to Cooranbong in 1970, Glynn has taught in many schools in Australia, New Zealand and Papua New Guinea and returned to Samoa multiple times.

A lover of music, Glynn has spent his retirement updating Seventh-day Adventist Church hymnals. Beginning with the Samoan hymnal, Glynn has volunteered many hours notating hymns for the Kirabati, Tongan, Fijian and Pidgin hymnbooks and fundraised extensively for their printing and distribution throughout the Pacific.

The class of 1945 honours Glynn for his commitment to the ministry of teaching and his contribution to the musical history of the Adventist Church.

PR BOB POSSINGHAM, 1955

The Adelaide-born Robert Possingham came to the Australasian Missionary College not long after becoming a Seventh-day Adventist. A fellow church member had suggested he study theology. "I laughed at the idea of doing the ministerial course," he says—but the idea stuck. It wasn't long before the South Australian was packing his bags for Cooranbong.

In December 1956, a year after graduating from Avondale, Robert married Noreen Thorpe—the two will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary next year. The family—sons Robert and Mark and daughters Sharelle and Roanne—followed Robert Snr around the South Pacific as he took on various roles.

Robert's first calls were to literature ministry in South Australia and Western Australia, then to evangelism, then to youth ministry in Victoria, New Zealand and Queensland. He then directed youth ministry at the church's union conference level for 18 years. Robert served for 36 years in youth ministry and says seeing the changes in the lives of young adults have been among the best experiences of his life.

Robert has also volunteered in the community, including 18 years as a chaplain—eight with the State Emergency Service (SES)—15 years as an SES peer support officer and 40 years as a Justice of the Peace.

Robert credits his wife's unflinching love and support as a source of strength. "All who know me say she deserves an award of bravery," he says. "Noreen was indeed God's choice of a life partner for me."

The class of 1955 honours Robert for a lifetime of service to youth ministry within the Adventist Church.

LEAVING A LEGACY

When John Waters left high school at age 15, he was determined to never again set foot in an educational institution. A local Seventh-day Adventist church screening of The Cry of New Guinea, which showed Pr Len Barnard's missionary work, changed that determination.

"We decided we needed to do more than grow pineapples and put roofs on houses," John says. Accompanied by his family—wife Margaret and daughters Beverley and Janette—John returned to and completed high school at age 31. His classmates affectionately referred to him as "Dad."

John graduated from Avondale's primary teaching course in 1965. His first appointment was as the head teacher of Invercargill Adventist School in New Zealand. This was followed by a move to Canada and the position of principal in three Adventist academies: Halifax, Sandy Lake and Cariboo. In 1988, he became the director of education for the church's Trans-Australian Union Conference and received his doctorate from Andrews University.

With his background in building and construction, John has continued to include physical labour in his work and home life. He cites a mission trip to Mexico with his students as one of his most interesting experiences—a small building project during which time they lived in the dormitories with the students. It was an experience not unlike the film that had inspired him to become a teacher in the first place. In the years since, John has worked with local communities in the construction of two churches and six schools.

The class of 1965 honours John for his commitment to quality, Christ-focused education within the Adventist Church.

DR JOHN WATERS, 1965

For Carol Tasker (nee Hay), a career as a cross-cultural educator began at Avondale. The third-year student needed help with her fees, so she joined the college's student missionary program, which offered one free unit in the final year in return for one year of service. The experience at what is now Samoa Adventist College changed Carol's life—it led to three decades of work for the Seventh-day Adventist Church in six countries.

The journey began four days after graduation—Carol married David Tasker in the Watson Hall chapel in a service conducted by the late Dr Arthur Patrick. The couple raised their two boys, Nathan and Stephen, in the Solomon Islands. After a move back to New Zealand, the family headed to Papua New Guinea. Carol lectured in education and religion at Pacific Adventist University (PAU). She became director of Services to Adventist International Libraries while working on her doctoral degree at Andrews University in the United States. Then came roles as dean of the School of Education, again at PAU, and as supervisor of master's theses and doctoral dissertations at the Adventist International Institute of Advanced Studies in the Philippines. Carol is now the associate director of Adventist Education for the church in the South Pacific.

Carol and David have embraced cultural diversity. It has added colour and meaning to their lives and influenced the career and lifestyle choices of their children. It has also seen Carol teach hundreds of international students—she is humbled to be one of the mentors for a generation of leaders.

The class of 1975 honours Carol for faithfully responding to God's calling and for her commitment to the ministry of teaching.

DR CAROL TASKER, 1975

For Vanessa Blagden (nee Bazley), the Avondale experience was a family tradition—her father, uncle and aunts had all attended the college before her. Yet having grown up in the small country town of Monto, Queensland, with a population of less than 1800, Avondale seemed like a daunting place.

However, it wasn't long before Vanessa settled in—she found her place in Avondale Memorial Seventh-day Adventist Church's youth group and joined Pathfinders. She married David Blagden in 1984 and graduated with a Diploma of Teaching in 1985.

The Blagden family—sons Brenton and Luke were born in 1993 and 1994—stayed in the area, with Vanessa teaching first at Avondale Primary School and later at Avondale High School. An interest in the arts soon led Vanessa to enter the photography field. She started D+V Photography and over the years has been the director of a number of other businesses—CAD3 Architecture Firm, Studio V and Enviably Home Styling, her most recent venture. Her love of teaching has remained, and over the years Vanessa has employed 39 people in the photography business, many of these high school students from Avondale School.

"My goals in life are to continue to grow and allow life experiences to make me a better person," Vanessa says. "I would not change my choices. I am extremely pleased that Avondale has contributed so much to my life."

The class of 1985 honours Vanessa for her commitment to Christ-focused education both inside and outside the classroom, as well as her dedication to photography and the arts.

VANESSA BLAGDEN, 1985

JERRY UNSER, 1995

Jerry Unser got lucky. The Long Beach, California, native had a friend in the United States with family connections to Avondale College. That helped him get a student visa. By the end of his year at Avondale, Jerry had met Karen Schubert, who would become his wife.

Jerry and Karen married in 1979. They have lived and raised their children—Carrie Lee and Mikelle—on a 67-acre property in the Gold Coast hinterland since 1985. The Unser's share the property with Karen's parents and sister's family. The extended support is not only a benefit but also an adventure—Jerry and Karen are now raising their granddaughter, Ava.

Jerry is a co-founder of STORM Co, which in 1993 sent its first teams of trained young adults to work for, learn from and encourage local communities. He continues to lead several teams to rural Queensland each year.

After completing his education degree in 1983, Jerry began working as a physical education teacher for what is now the Department of Education and Training in Queensland. In 1988, he joined Emmanuel College, for which he now continues to work as a student counsellor. Jerry's professional interest lies in developing mentoring and resilience programs in education—he graduated from La Sierra University in the United States with a master's degree in counselling coordinated by Avondale.

The class of 1995 honours Jerry for the physical, mental and spiritual support he continues to give to young adults.

ANITA CARVILL, 2005

It's called Manna Haven, a not-for-profit vegetarian cafe operating in a purpose-built extension of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Bryon Bay. Anita Carvill (nee Kingston) managed the ministry between 2011 and 2013. She learned to trust God—"I'm still learning"—as He pulled together all the resources to establish Manna Haven. Helping the ministry reach its full potential—Anita's still on the management committee—remains a focus.

But not the sole focus. Anita, who married Brendon Carvill in 2004, is mother to three children, Ezra, Malachi and Mayah. Raising the children now takes priority. She and Brendon are also building their own house using recycled material.

Anita is a creative who writes her own worship songs, moulds pottery, cooks and sews.

Born in Brisbane to Pr Tim and Heather Kingston, Anita came to Avondale College from Mildura Senior and Henderson Colleges. She graduated with a Bachelor of Education in 2005 and, the following year, put her theory into practice as a teacher at Central Coast Adventist School. After four years, she joined the staff at Blue Hills College near Lismore, where she also accepted responsibilities in communication and marketing.

Looking back on her experience at Avondale, Anita is thankful for the leadership opportunities it gave her. It also gave her a network of like-minded friends, friends who are also passionate about connecting more with the community.

The class of 2005 honours Anita for her commitment to a cause and for her contribution to the ministry of teaching.
